

THE NATIONAL CALAMITY

Into the future it is not permitted to any of us to look; it seems to us dark and full of trouble. The clouds of the world seem to be hanging over us backward, and the snow on the old seems to have receded. Let us, however, in the horror which we feel at the present, be not so much as to place before us a great and thoughtful people, trusting to God, who has guided us so long. I know, Sir, that you and your associates on this day except what is absolutely indispensable, and therefore, I like, before my departure, to say a few words to you.

Mr. JOHN GRAMAM arose to second the motion. He spoke with great feeling, and in a strain of unusual pathos. He said: "May it please the Court, I feel almost as if the power of commanding language upon this fearful occasion, which has reached us this morning, is not the least of the things which have been brought to us from the hands of the most excessive grief. It is not the individual ABRAHAM LINCOLN who has fallen, but the hand of the most excessive grief, and constitutional head as well of what I believe to be the greatest government upon the face of the earth. In the lesson which has been read to us, the title saying that 'Death leaves a shroud of gloom on the hands of the living, and that the living are left to be comforted by the memory of the dead.' There is no place so lonely as that which is reached by death, but what that greatest of all fathers has wrought with which we are now passing into the history of the country. His Presidential term which is just ended, and the term which is just beginning, are the most memorable periods of Executive administration in the history of this country. It cannot be expected upon this occasion, that I should be able to do more than to say a few words to you, and to say that, in the view of the great calamity which has befallen the nation, that anything like justice can be done to the memory of the deceased. The services at the Broadway Synagogue were more than ordinarily impressive yesterday, by the sad and mournful reflections excited because of the assassination of the lamented President of the United States. In lieu of the usual 'Prayer for the Government,' the Rev. S. M. ISAACS briefly and feelingly addressed the congregation, speaking of the appalling calamity that had befallen the nation in the person of its good, wise and beloved Chief Magistrate, and the great statesman of the age. He reflected the gloom and despondency universally felt as the terrible intelligence burst upon the nation at the hour when public gratitude was ascending to heaven for the bright prospect of speedy peace and reunion. There was not a lover of his race, a lover of liberty, but would profoundly mourn the country's loss. He would not attempt to pierce the future, which now seemed so dark and threatening. In the hands of God was the destiny of the nation. The Reverend gentleman then offered a fervent and eloquent prayer, which would bless the United States, and be with the people in their hour of trial, and so direct the mind and counsels of the successful ABRAHAM LINCOLN, that he might stately pilot this State through the perils and storms that threatened its safety.

At the earnest solicitation of a number of citizens, Miss EDNA HARDING will deliver an oration on the death of ABRAHAM LINCOLN. The lady's ability, as well as her personal knowledge of the life and career of the President, warrants the opinion that she will do justice to the sad, yet noble theme. The public are invited to attend, and a large audience will doubtless greet the speaker, who has volunteered her services.

The National Academy of Design passed the following resolution yesterday in council: Resolved, That the council of the National Academy of Design bear with profound grief the assassination of ABRAHAM LINCOLN, the late beloved Chief Magistrate of the United States. Resolved, That we cherish a deep reverence for his great character and inestimable services to our country, and to the cause of freedom throughout the world. Resolved, That we devoutly pray Almighty God to bless our country from this day forward, and to preserve it from all treason and slavery. Resolved, That in respect for the memory of our Chief Magistrate, the ceremony of the opening of the Academy Building and the opening of the Exhibition be postponed.

On Saturday morning, GEORGE WELLS, better known as "Southern George" while conversing with an acquaintance at the corner of Chatham and Pearl streets, made use of the following language, in referring to the assassination of President LINCOLN: "Old Abe, the son of a—, is dead, and he ought to have been killed long ago." Serat. Wells, of the Sixth Precinct, who heard the villainous remark, knocked the scoundrel down. Wells was then taken before Justice Downing, at the Tombs, who, in default of $1,000 bail, sent him to the Penitentiary for six months.

On Saturday morning, a man whose name is unknown, used blasphemous and insulting language about the late President at a newspaper stand in the Bowery. He was immediately attacked and knocked down by an indignant crowd, but regaining his feet, he made his escape, the crowd following him for several blocks.

The city departments. The balcony of the City Hall was draped with black and white crepe, and the flags floated mournfully at half-mast. The chamber of the Board of Supervisors was hung with crepe, and the Comptroller's office also displayed the emblems of mourning. The Mayor's office, the Surrogate's, the Comptroller's and nearly all the other public offices were closed at noon.

when the artists of the company emphatically refused to act, that the church consented unwillingly to close its doors. Mr. JOHN WOOD, we are sure is in no way implicated in the affair. It is, nevertheless, unfortunate that it should have occurred at her theatre. The profession is not free from the stain of treason. It was, however, that a rabid and a Niblo's Garden, expressed his satisfaction at the calamity which had befallen the nation. We were unable to learn his name. It is Mr. WHITEL's duty at once to do over this, and hand the culprit over to an officer. Until the funeral of Mr. LINCOLN there will be no more amusements in New-York. Superintendent KENNEDY has issued an order to that effect.

The citizens of Boston, overwhelmed with grief at the awful calamity which has befallen our common country in the tragic death of our great and good President, and in the deadly assault upon the wise and sagacious Secretary of State, and the members of his family, spontaneously assembled, and resolved that an expression of their strong and fervent sympathy be immediately sent to the surviving members of their afflicted families in view of the irreparable loss which they and their countrymen have sustained by this sad event, and also that they be sent to ANASTAS JOHNSON, the conditional successor of ABRAHAM LINCOLN, as President of the United States, of their confidence in his integrity, his patriotism and his manhood, and of their determination to give him their unqualified and unvarying support, imploring the blessing of God to guide him in the discharge of the duties which characterized his illustrious predecessor.

The news of the death of President LINCOLN followed the people of this city like a pall. The flags on the public buildings were displayed at half-mast, as were also the flags of private residences throughout the city generally. The following proclamation by the acting Mayor was issued, the actual Mayor being so much prostrated by the sad news that he was unable to attend to his duties: Mayor's Office, City Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 15, 1865. The President of the United States has been murdered at the national capital by an assassin. The parallel to a crime under all the circumstances so heinous and atrocious. It will be received by the people as a national calamity, and will weigh down their hearts with grief and mourning.

An almost entire suspension of business was the marked characteristic of Jersey City. The fire-bell rung minute peas; the flags were hoisted at half-mast over dwellings and ferry-boats, and a general air of sadness and excitement prevailed. The stores of the principal citizens, Messrs. Kordenski, King, Lee, Hayn S. Moffat, and many others, were being in deep mourning, as well as the various newspaper offices, the Hudson County Insurance Company, the American Telegraph Office, and a lot of private dwellings and business offices. The Mayor, Orange, called a public meeting of citizens, at which resolutions were passed appropriate to the dreadful calamity which called them forth.

On walking upon Mayor Taylor, we found that the signs proper to be taken had not yet been decided upon. In the meantime, as in other places, an almost universal closing of stores and suspension of business marked the gloom and sorrow felt all over the city. The Mayor's house, the engine houses and the chief hotels were hung with crepe, and the insignia of death were displayed by Messrs. F. C. Lohr, Cadmus Schneider, W. T. Curtis, C. L. Corley, W. Scheikart, and a large number of other prominent citizens. The ferry-boats bore their colors at half-mast, and horror and deep grief were the universal sentiment.

The city is draped in mourning. All the business places are closed. The most intense grief and indignation prevails among the people. The Governor has appointed to-day for giving assent to the bills passed, with the usual ceremonies, upon receiving the news of President LINCOLN's murder, he sent the following message to the Council: My DEAR SIR: The intelligence of the death of our Chief Magistrate, which has just reached me, has filled me with grief and sorrow, and I have immediately suspended the business of the Government. I have in submission to the Divine will of Him who doeth all things well, yet we cannot but deplore the loss of our late much-loved President. Resolved, That in the death of our Chief Magistrate we have sustained a loss unparalleled since the death of the immortal WASHINGTON.

The city is draped in mourning. The stores generally are closed and labor suspended. Nearly every building on River-street is draped with the emblems of sorrow and gloom. Flags are at half-mast, and every face wears a look of sorrow and gloom. Amid the general lamentations this morning, a man named D. L. HUNT, of Rochester, made the remark that Mr. LINCOLN ought to have been assassinated four years ago, and summary vengeance was assumed at once, and HUNT was arrested and lodged in jail. The affair made much excitement.

down in the fullness of life, and when strongest in the hearts of the people. ANABAS LINCOLN, a friend of the poor and oppressed, the deliverer of his country, has been gained to a martyr. That the people of Iowa, who admired and loved their patriot and so generously sustaining the cause of freedom, may sorrowfully testify their sorrow over the national calamity, I write them to assemble in their respective places of worship on Thursday, the 27th day of April, at 10 o'clock A. M. for humiliation and prayer to a mighty God, and I also request, that travel within the State and all other vocations be suspended on that day, and that all public offices be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days.
