NEW-YORK, April 17. To the Honourable the KNIGHTS, CITIZENS, and BURGESSSES OF GREAT-BRITAIN, in Parliament assembled...

IMPRESSED with the warmest sentiments of loyalty and affection to our most gracious sovereign, and zealously attached to his person, family and government...

That from the year 1683, till the above-mentioned period, this colony has enjoyed a legitimate constitution of three distinct branches, a Governor, Council, and General Assembly...

It is therefore with inexpressible grief, that we have to relate a series of measures adopted by the British Parliament, subversive of that constitution...

An exemption from internal taxation, and the exclusive right of providing for the support of our own civil government, and the administration of justice in this colony...

The trial by a jury of the vicinage in causes civil and criminal, arising within the colony, we consider as essential to the security of our lives and liberties...

When we consider, that the cognizance of causes raising on the land here, by the wisdom of the English constitution, been appropriated to the courts of common law...

Nor in claiming these essential RIGHTS do we entertain the most distant desire of Independence on the parent kingdom; we acknowledge the Parliament of Great-Britain necessarily entitled to a supreme direction...
